Catching Up

Due to the transition to our new leadership, and while that leadership deals with many serious business and infrastructure issues as we rebuild the Alliance from the ground up, we are obliged to combine several issues of the National Alliance BULLETIN.

The September BULLETIN was mailed in November. We catch up with the rest of 2014 with this issue, and project that we will be back on schedule by March. The Next BULLETIN will be for January-February 2015, and will be mailed in February. We apologize for this necessity.

Chairman Williams on Dr. Pierce's Library

The physical work on the William Pierce Memorial Library is progressing rapidly. Its stairwell, pictured on the next page, was completed in December. Many thanks go to member Chris L. in Ohio for donating the beautiful red oak railings and surround that give our library the elegant touch that it deserves.

When I first learned that Erich Gliebe was trying to sell Dr. Pierce's library back in February 2014, I contacted him and negotiated to purchase it myself to preserve it.

In March we moved it to Tennessee where I have constructed a headquarters building and media center for the Alliance.

At that time, this complex was built for the new incarnation of the National Alliance that I and Kevin Strom decided to launch as soon as Mr. Gliebe did away with the original membership organization structure of the Alliance in September, 2013. The complex is now fully a part of the National Alliance, as the two groups became one when I succeeded to the chairmanship.

In July, desperate for funds, Mr. Gliebe offered to me another large book collection, stored upstairs in the William Luther Pierce Memorial Hall, that had belonged to an Alliance member. I purchased those books, too, and moved them to Tennessee in August. In early October, Mr. Gliebe offered to step down and suggested that I be named Alliance Chairman. I was not expecting this at all, and would have never moved all those books had he offered me the position in February, but what was done was done. I accepted his offer and, by the end of October, I was officially the new Chairman and I merged our National Alliance with the original one that Dr. Pierce founded.

The library is being organized on the 68 sturdy wooden shelves that held the second collection, and volumes are being added from that collection, as well as from a couple of thousand books from my own personal library and from another collection donated by a member. We will have a world class racially-oriented research library by the time it is fully organized. It will eventually have to be housed in an even larger, purpose-built facility, the construction of which will be a major project.

In the photograph below, the staircase is visible and, at the head of it, can be seen Dr. Pierce's urn, which contained his ashes after his death; the podium he used for many years at the National Office; and an oil portrait of Dr. Pierce which I painted; along with a glimpse of a few of the thousands of volumes that make up this invaluable collection. The library is more than just books, too — it includes innumerable hand-written notes Dr. Pierce made and inserted in many of the books, greatly adding to their research and historical value for us.

Others have offered to add their own book collections to this one. I have drawn up a new Last Will and Testament that makes it clear that the Pierce library belongs to the National Alliance, not to my personal estate.

Book Sales Coming

For many months, National Vanguard Books has been without any staff, a functioning Web site, or any means of making or fulfilling sales. Its records are a shambles and necessary equipment is missing. The new leadership is taking stock of the inventory, software, records, and other necessities before resuming operations, which we expect will occur in a few months. The first operations to resume will be bulk sales of titles to bookstores and other distributors, which we will announce online and in the BULLETIN.

Main Web Site Up and Running

The totally new National Alliance Web site, at its traditional address of http://natall.com — which it has used since the 1990s — is one of which every Alliance member can be proud. The new, modern, and easy-to-navigate site will serve as an initial "first impression" and explanation of the Alliance for prospective members, featuring updated editions of our summary doctrinal statement What We Believe; and the comprehensive, in-depth introduction to our program (and history of the Alliance), our booklet What is the National Alliance? For those new readers with an interest in furthering their education, there are feeds and direct links to our news and multimedia online magazine, nationalvanguard.org, and our mentoring/discussion forum, whitebiocentrism.com. For those ready to join — or re-join, now that the Alliance is being rebuilt — there are membership applications and supporter forms available for download.

In the near future, natall.com will add a large collection of William Pierce's and Kevin Strom's essays and radio broadcasts, stored on the old natall and natvan sites, as an archive section on the new organizational site. Many of these timeless pieces will also be published on the National Vanguard Web site.

As we move forward and rebuild the physical and business infrastructure of the Alliance, expect more additions to our online media in 2015.

Special thanks to Chairman Williams, and members Vanessa Neubauer, Kevin Strom, and Randolph D. for their work on this project.

Chairman Williams: Challenges are Being Faced

My learning curve for dealing with all the responsibilities of my chairmanship has been slow, but exciting. All the needed Board meetings were held; corporate papers, bank accounts, numerous files, post office boxes, keys — everything — has now been transferred to me as new National Alliance Chairman from previous Chairman Erich Gliebe. Erich devoted 25 years to the National Alliance and can now spend more time with his son and promoting European cultural festivals.

Numerous trips have been made between the new National Alliance complex in Tennessee to our West Virginia community. A skeleton staff is in place on "The Land" now to make it habitable for new community members in the near future and to allow normal business operations to resume. Electricity and water have been restored to the most important buildings, and repairs to the long-neglected structures are taking place.

It's unfortunate the state to which our once preeminent organization has fallen in recent years — but we are still here, we are solvent, and our glass is more than half full.

The McCorkill Bequest Case

Appeals will be heard in a Canadian court March 19, 2015, on the decision in June of this year to strike down the bequest of Dr. H. Robert McCorkill of approximately $220,000 to the National Alliance. Several Jewish organizations challenged his will, using Dr. McCorkill's long estranged sister — who did not even know her brother had died until contacted by the Jews nine years later — and influenced a judge to make the Orwellian ruling that our Alliance should not receive the estate because our advocacy of White interests would go against Canadian "public policy."

The judge wrote that the National Alliance's foundational documents, such as What is the National Alliance?, are "racist, white-supremacist and hate-inspired," and that "[t]hey are disgusting, repugnant and revolting."

The judge also mocked Erich Gliebe's attempts to portray the Alliance as a cultural organization interested in European civilization, saying these "feeble protestations only call to mind the attempts by the Nazis in Hitler's Germany to mask their true intentions through organizations like the Hitler Youth. History tells us that behind the mask lurked some of the worst evil ever visited upon the human race."

Mark Potok, the Jew who runs the Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC) and an intervenor in the case, gloated over the judge's ruling: "The court decision comes at a time when the NA, which a little over a decade ago was the dominant hate group in America, is struggling to survive. It has gone from an organization that once brought in about $1 million a year and had some 1,400 dues-paying members to a group that is nearly bankrupt and has only a smattering of supporters left...The loss of the bequest could help finally destroy the remnants of the once-storied NA. The group seems unlikely to survive without a source of new funds."

The "Centre for Israel and Jewish Affairs" also intervened in the case along with the SPLC. Another Jewish group, "B'nai Brith Canada," said the ruling was "a strong statement. Today, we are fortunate that the National Alliance is a severely diminished group barely holding onto its shrinking membership. The threat was that an injection of about a quarter of a million dollars might have breathed new life into this dying organization." The Jews' rumors of our Alliance's death are highly exaggerated, to paraphrase Mr. Twain.

The National Alliance's attorney, Mr. Hughes, along with noted Canadian White civil rights activist Paul Fromm, will represent our interests on appeal against this ruling. A reasonable court would respect the clearly expressed wishes of the deceased, note the entirely legal nature of our national and international outreach, and rule in our favor. The question is: Will the Canadian court be reasonable?

Increase in Minimum Dues

Beginning on January 1, 2015, the minimum dues pledge for members (and minimum monthly contribution amount for supporters who receive the BULLETIN) will increase to $20 per month, up from 2014's $10 minimum. This increase is necessary for three reasons: To fund the necessary rebuilding and restaffing of the Alliance, to compensate for the increase in costs caused by the constantly-falling real value of the U.S. dollar, and to limit Alliance membership to those who are serious about our program. It has been 23 years since the minimum dues were last increased.

Chairman Williams states: "In 1992 the first thing I did as Membership Coordinator was to double the minimum monthly dues from $5 to $10. That was with Dr. Pierce's blessing, of course. We had very few members drop out then due to our upping their minimum pledges, and the boost in revenue made possible the hiring of new staff members to handle the increased National Office work load. It's good to remember the words on the membership application that each of us has signed, pledging each member to choose a monthly dues amount 'as high as his means permit.'

"We will be keeping the supporter category for those who, for sufficient reasons, do not want to be listed as members of the National Alliance, but who want to help us and be apprised of our progress by receiving the BULLETIN. Both membership and supporters' application forms can be downloaded from our Web site natall.com, printed, filled in, and mailed to me for consideration."

Membership

The Alliance is now a membership organization again and we will republish our National Alliance Membership Handbook, reverting in all essential concepts to Dr. Pierce's original 1993 edition, updated where necessary for the changed conditions of 2015. This new edition will supersede the 2005 edition. The 2005 Handbook made drastic and disastrous changes to Dr. Pierce's original ideas, and is hereby withdrawn.

Commentary by Chairman Williams

Getting Back on the Upward Path

A very interesting book could be written about all that has happened to the National Alliance in just the past year alone. The Alliance was declared "near death" more than two years ago by our civic-minded watchdogs at the Southern Poverty Law Center — but here we are, alive and well and beginning to ascend the upward path again in 2015. The Gliebe/Walker/Gliebe era of the Alliance is over, and a new era, a Piercian era, has begun.

Rewind 23 Years

Kevin Strom and I arrived on the mountain when Dr. Pierce had no one else there but his wife Sue to help him. Things really started to happen for our Alliance after we went on staff — Kevin as Media Director and producer of American Dissident Voices, and I as the Alliance's first Membership Coordinator. Our fortunes rose even higher when Fred Streed, Joe and Patti Pryce, and others came on board soon after. We were doubling up on BULLETIN issues then, too, trying to catch up. There was a December 1991-January 1992 issue — then this message to members from Dr. Pierce in the next BULLETIN, dated February-March 1992 (page 6):

> Kevin Strom was a radio broadcast engineer before he began producing our American Dissident Voices programs, but repairing transmitters and climbing antenna towers wouldn't seem to have much to do with putting together a radio program. He is able to produce good programs because he has good artistic judgment, a good command of the English language, a thorough understanding of our ideology, and a feeling for the medium through which he is expressing himself.
> Will Williams was the commander of a Green Beret unit in Vietnam, an architect, a home builder, and a portrait painter before becoming our Membership Coordinator. None of his previous experience seems especially relevant to his present task, except that both as a combat officer and as a businessman he learned to work closely with other people and to motivate them. There are two things that really qualify him to be our Membership Coordinator: a strong sense of purpose and a equally strong set of principles. He's a man who could have played successfully by the Jews' rules, but who instead said to himself, "This is a rotten system, and I'm not going to be a part of it any longer!"
> We can't offer everyone the option of cutting himself loose from the Jewish system yet, but there is a way for nearly every member to work more effectively to end that system. Together we must try to find that way.

$2 Million Lawsuit

In early 2014, Erich Gliebe and the two other sitting Board members at that time were sued for $2 million by a half-dozen former National Alliance members, who publicly demanded that Erich Gliebe step down as Chairman and name a successor. The National Alliance itself was not sued.

This small ad hoc group calls itself the "National Alliance Reform and Restoration Group" (NARRG). For most of their short existence, they publicly solicited support based on one demand only: that Erich Gliebe step down and that a new Chairman be named.

But when Mr. Gliebe did step down, and when the Board did select a new Chairman, that new Chairman was not the leading member of NARRG — as that person had hoped. So now the NARRG leader, and some of his followers, have begun attacking me on their embarrassingly incompetent Web site and threatening to disrupt the National Alliance, though neither I nor the Alliance are defendants in their suit.

NARRG actually wants the court to dissolve National Alliance assets and hand everything over to them, despite the fact that, as former members, they have no standing whatsoever.

They tried earlier to get a court receiver to take over the Alliance and manage it, but failed at that. They then demanded that Mr. Gliebe turn over all financial and membership records to them, and now are under the delusion that they will get this sensitive information from me. That will happen over my dead body.

Members should not be alarmed by this suit. Erich Gliebe now has a Virginia attorney representing him — and not just any attorney, but the elected Commonwealth's Attorney for the jurisdiction where this case is being considered.

No National Alliance funds have been spent on this lawsuit. In contrast, NARRG has tapped its supporters for some $25,000, they say, and they intend to pay up to $50,000 to their attorney, who has publicly stated he finds the Alliance's views "repulsive." But it is unlikely that many will donate money to their now irrelevant cause. Their lawyer bills them by the hour, rather than on the usual contingency basis, because he knows the defendants are judgment-proof and that his clients have no case.

The good NARRG did was to prompt Erich Gliebe to step down and turn the Alliance over to new leadership. I thanked them for that and told them it was time to close ranks and begin the healing process. My offer was spurned.

What is to be done?

Dr. Pierce answered that question in ATTACK! (the predecessor to National Vanguard) No. 64 in 1978: "The answer, in brief, is that an organization must be built which satisfies the following requirements: It must be, first of all, not an ad hoc organization, but an organization based on fundamental principles, an organization with a world view, essentially religious in nature, shared by every member of the organization. It must be, in structure, a hierarchical organization, like an army — or a religious order — with the degree of understanding, of commitment, and of discipline increasing with the level of responsibility in the organization."

This is the path I will follow as Alliance Chairman. There is no requirement for any member to declare himself a capital-"C" Cosmotheist, but each member should be in agreement with our organization's fundamental principles and values which are, at their roots and as defined by our founder, spiritual values.

American Dissident Voices

One of the great success stories of the National Alliance has been our radio program, American Dissident Voices (ADV), which was resumed for us by its founder, Kevin Alfred Strom, about one year ago, though many readers of this BULLETIN may be finding out about this for the first time. We now have a solid track record of 52 weeks of on-time, on-target programming since then, and we have just reached the 23rd anniversary of this ground-breaking educational effort, which was begun in December 1991. You can listen to ADV each week by visiting nationalvanguard.org or whitebiocentrism.com, where the latest show is posted every Saturday morning. W. W. W.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Erich Gliebe discontinued Alliance membership in September, 2013. Everyone in our database now has the status of supporter. As the new Chairman, I have reinstated the National Alliance as a membership organization. If, for sufficient reason, you prefer to maintain your supporter status rather than being a member, you may. But if you want to be an active member of our organization, please indicate as much on your dues statement when you return it this month and I'll make the change. Being a member entitles you to this monthly internal BULLETIN, a Life Rune pin, a membership card, a copy of the new National Alliance Membership Handbook as soon as it is published — and a subscription to National Vanguard magazine, reinstating a benefit that was in place under Dr. Pierce. From time to time, other special items may be sent to members in good standing. Supporters help us financially and receive the BULLETIN and National Vanguard.

Because this BULLETIN covers the last three months of 2014, many of you will be behind in your dues as reflected in the enclosed dues statement. Please try to catch up now, or let me know by email (businessoffice@natall.com) or postal mail if you can't do so all at once, and I'll try to work with you.

It will be most helpful at this time if as many of you as possible pay ahead on your pledges because funds are tight and there is much that requires funding, especially getting our publishing arm operational again and adding some more staff on the mountain. My predecessor incurred considerable debt which I have nearly paid off now, for the most part with my own savings.

Some members stopped paying their dues during the period in which the Alliance appeared moribund, but are still receiving this BULLETIN. The arrears owed by these members is, in many cases, significant. To such members I say: The National Alliance is moribund no longer, and I am going to forgive your arrears on one condition: You must reapply for membership at the new minimum monthly rate, or more, as high as your means permit. Those who are still in arrears of six months or more after receiving the next BULLETIN, and who do not accept this offer, will be dropped. Those who pay their arrears in full, or who pay ahead, have my deepest thanks and appreciation for stepping up in this time of great need — and greater potential.
